Dedication

I dedicate this book to my absolutely miraculous first grandson, Adam Jacob Dunlop, who definitely is in a class by himself.

Thanks and acknowledgements

I would like to thank hardworking teachers all over the world. You are my partners in this endeavor. Together we have created that magical space, the classroom – that seemingly mundane territory, where ideas are currency and where imagination and creativity flourish as we continue to serve our students with very practical language concerns.

My special thanks go to my wonderful and ever watchful editor, Penny Ur, who has offered endless and invaluable suggestions, slowed me down, encouraged me, and kept me on track.

I would also like to thank Frances Amrani and Annie Cornford for their careful reading and excellent suggestions.

I am also most grateful to my colleagues at Northern Arizona University both in Yuma and in Flagstaff, as well as my colleagues from Arizona Western College. You have been splendid professional partners. May we have many more creative years together! Finally, a special word of appreciation to Dr. Catherine Medina of Northern Arizona University, who was my listening partner as I was finishing this book and who was able to say just the right words when they were needed.

The author would also like to thank Kate Charlesworth for the illustrations which appear throughout the book and Sue Lightfoot for the Index.
