Acknowledgements

I would like to thank the following:

- the contributors to this volume, not just for their insights (which are clear for all to see) but also for their patience
- my colleagues in the TESOL team in the School of Education at the University of Leeds, for giving me time to complete the editing of this book
- Jill Carroll, for her work on the wordprocessing of the text
- colleagues at CUP, particularly Alison Sharpe
- Katharine Mendelsohn, for her unobtrusive editing
- an anonymous reader, who provided detailed feedback on a draft of this book.

I would also like to thank David Hayes, Adrian Holliday and Fauzia Shamim, with whom I have discussed the ideas expressed here on many occasions.

I am particularly grateful to all the teachers and their learners – in many different parts of Asia and Africa – who have allowed me into their classrooms over the last fifteen years. Above all, I must thank my English-teaching colleagues and friends in Indonesia for, without them, my ‘autonomous’ assumptions would never have been questioned. It is to them that this book is dedicated.
