Thanks

We wish to thank the following people:

Students with whom we have learnt to tell stories.

Both sceptical and enthusiastic colleagues, in particular Jane Lockwood, Katya Benjamin, Paul Davis, Mo Strangeman, Cynthia Beresford, Jan Aspeslagh, Charles Williams, James Dixey, Michael Swan, Margaret Callow, Carlos Maeztu, Richard and Marjorie Baudins, Elena Morgan, Lindsay Brown, Loren McGrail, Sarah Braine.

Bernard Dufeu who opened our eyes to the psychodrama use of tales.

The artistic oral tradition we know best is that of the Greek shadow puppeteers and we particularly want to acknowledge the insights gained from working with Giorgos Charidimos.

Books that have helped us in our thinking about the oral story include:

Bruno Bettelheim, The Uses of Enchantment, Penguin 1978

Iona and Peter Opie, The Classic Fairy Tales, OUP 1974

Vladimir Propp, Morphology of the Folktale, Austin 1968

Gianni Rodari, Grammatica della Fantasia, Einaudi 1973

Finally, this book owes a heavy debt to the various oral traditions of which it is a curious continuation, and to individuals whose written stories we have ‘skeletonised’ in preparation for many oral tellings.
