

Figure 2.13. A schematic representation of the categories of heat and water convection through the sediments and crust. Axial (ridge crest) heat convection is divided into that from high-temperature (c.350 °C) and lower-temperature vents, and the rest is off-axis flow through the thin veneer of sediments on the ridge flank.

