

Apply and Analyze (3.3.1)

Examples of Input Front-loading and Input Back-loading

With the help of the information provided in the table below, you should now be ready to provide examples of online and/or F2F activities that you have used or would use and deem suitable for a blended path with input front-loading or input back-loading. For example, depending on when the input loading occurs, the scaffolding plan to prepare learners for input comprehension may take place online or F2F. Complete the table below by providing appropriate examples:

Discovery and comprehension of input through ...	Input front-loading	Example	Input back-loading	Example
1. Brainstorming for exploring the topic	Online		F2F
2. Scaffolding for input comprehension	Online		F2F
3. Focusing on communication/conversation	F2F		Online	