RELEVANCE THEORY — WEB MATERIALS
PREPARED BY: Billy Clark, b.clark@mdx.ac.uk

THIS VERSION 7 JULY 2013

. . . .

FURTHER RESOURCES

Here are some further resources to help you to find out more about relevance theory and related topics. I will add to this as I become aware of new resources. Please do contact me if you find anything which you think would be useful to add here.

. . .

Relevance Theory Online Bibliographic Service

As mentioned in the book, the most comprehensive resource on relevance theory is the online bibliography maintained by Francisco Yus:

Relevance Theory Online Bibliographic Service
http://www.ua.es/personal/francisco.yus/rt.html
This frequently updated and comprehensive list of sources which discuss or apply relevance-theoretic ideas is created and maintained by Francisco Yus at the Universidad de Alicante.

. . .

Personal websites or staff home pages

The book also points out that some relevance theorists have websites with links to downloadable work. The two mentioned in the book are those of Dan Sperber and Deirdre Wilson:

Dan Sperber's website with downloadable papers:
http://www.dan.sperber.com/

Deirdre Wilson's UCL home page with downloadable papers:
http://www.phon.ucl.ac.uk/home/D/

Here are some others:

Diane Blakemore
http://www.salford.ac.uk/humanities/hulss-academics/diane-blakemore

Robyn Carston
http://www.ucl.ac.uk/psychlangsci/research/linguistics/People/linguistics-staff/robyn_carston

Billy Clark
http://billyclark.net
My own personal website

http://www.mdx.ac.uk/aboutus/staffdirectory/Billy_Clark.aspx
My Middlesex University home page

Other websites

Occasionally, individual websites post useful material.

The book mentions the first two here:

http://languageevolution.wordpress.com/2007/06/06/relevance-theory/
Here you'll find a post introducing relevance theory and suggesting that it could be useful in accounting for evolution, with a response from Dan Sperber suggesting papers to read on this (alongside three much less relevant responses):

International Cognition and Culture
http://www.cognitionandculture.net/
The International Cognition and Culture Institute website (co-hosted by the London School of Economics and the Institut Jean Nicod) has lively blog discussions which sometimes address topics relevant to relevance theory:

Further resources will be added here soon. Please do contact me if you see others which could be added here.

. . . .