

Figure 8.8. The formation of β -alanine and γ -aminobutyric acid from decarboxylation of aspartic acid and glutamic acid, respectively, is a widely observed trend in the degradation of amino acids. The exact mechanism of formation for these two degradation products is not known in detail.

