

Chapter 1 links

The website www.forensicpsychology.net has a number of useful links relating to several areas of forensic psychology, including crime scene investigations, mental health, capital punishment and cognitive science.

The British Psychological Society's Division of Forensic Psychology website includes information about forensic psychology as a career path, along with details of journals and upcoming events. Visit http://dfp.bps.org.uk/dfp/dfp\_home.cfm for more information.

Similarly, Division 41 of the American Psychological Association is the American Psychology-Law Society, with more useful information on careers, publications and events www.ap-ls.org.

A companion website is available for Dennis Howitt's 'Introduction to Forensic and Criminal Psychology' (3rd edn.) here http://wps.pearsoned.co.uk/ema\_uk\_he\_howitt\_forpsych\_3. This includes multiple choice questions, essay questions, further reading, audio interviews, an interactive glossary and information about becoming a forensic and criminal psychologist.
